What's New Version 10.6.4: Added more language options Fixed encoding problem Improve page bleed area setting Fixed navigation bar setting issue Fixed some minor bugs Final thought: Even if HTML2PDF Converter is not necessarily more user-friendly than other solution, it is still ready to play a role in modern web pages. Its price doesn't hurt either. Just over two years ago I chose to withdraw from my masters because I had a better job offer. For the first few months or so I felt really uncomfortable with my decision. I spent a lot of time just watching YouTube videos and read some blogs, trying to figure out what the hell I was going to do now. I tried doing a few interviews, but they never went anywhere. Then one day my phone started ringing. I was amazed to hear from some publishers. I didn't know what to do with them, so I ended up just giving them a bunch of really bad advice. "Look, if you're not planning to publish soon, you can keep your manuscript." "Yeah, I'm going to take this offer." So it started out the same old thing. "I don't know if I should work full-time, or do something else." "No, you need to publish." "I'm going to keep reading blogs and watch YouTube videos." "No, you need to get some experience under your belt." "You need to join an MFA program." "I don't know if I should do an MFA." One by one. I know I sound like I'm complaining, but the truth is that
