But when I open my project is not recognized. I'm using Flash as video format. When I run the project or save it from the IDE it does not recognize it. How can I save my project? I'm trying to figure out how to save the project. I'm using Flash as my video output, and I'm using video. I want to convert the video into jpg format with any editor. I'm using the FlashDevelop. This is a .fla file with some video and image formats. When I'm saving it does not recognize any format. It always returns . Someone please help! A: "Export" (right click) The format to which to export your project to is set in a hidden file called ".bml" (and all flash projects start with this). Be careful when you export your project, if this file gets corrupted then you can't open the file again. You need to empty this hidden file before exporting. Also, you can use an "import" tool to load another project into FlashDevelop and it won't recreate the .bml file, you just have to make sure you have the same settings for export options. Molecular analysis of the inducible cytoskeletal element tangential cell belt in the rat retina. The tangential cell belt (TCB) is a prominent structural element of the retina which separates the inner nuclear layer (INL) from the outer nuclear layer (ONL) and contains two distinct populations of photoreceptors, rods and cones. In order to gain insight into the development and organization of this organ-specific structural element we have mapped genes expressed during its differentiation and determined the nature of the differentiation pathway. Marked overlapping patterns of expression of the beta-tubulin genes tubbeta1 and tubbeta3 as well as the beta4-tubulin gene tubbeta4 were found at the morphological borders of the INL and ONL. These border-specific mRNAs were synthesized in cells of the TCB but not in the same cell types of the entire retina. cDNA and genomic clones for beta-tubulin genes were isolated and used to determine the nature of the TCB cells. Transcripts for both tubbeta1 and tubbeta3 are most similar in size to isoforms found in developing photoreceptors, and the protein products show a certain degree of homology to photoreceptor beta-tub
