u.s.b, hello. thanks for stopping by and sharing your love for azadi ki ore.i would love to have someone get the rights for this film as long as they don't temper with the original version and chop off any scenes. if they show it on tv again, it would be fantastic!! i think that's a brilliant idea. the producer can make big money and if he isn't interested in making money, he can donate it to a charity somewhere. but if he let the movie out, he will surely get a load of blessings that he truly deserves for making this gem of a movie. thanks for the suggestion, bhagat. i will try to contact moserbaer. siddarth, hello. thanks for stopping by and sharing your love for azadi ki ore.i think i would love to see this movie again if it is a possibility. i am not from india, but i live in the u.s. and if it is ever shown on tv again, i would love to see it. thanks again for your suggestion. karthik, hello. thanks for stopping by and sharing your love for azadi ki ore.i would love to have someone get the rights for this film as long as they don't temper with the original version and chop off any scenes. if they show it on tv again, it would be fantastic!! i think that's a brilliant idea. the producer can make big money and if he isn't interested in making money, he can donate it to a charity somewhere. but if he let the movie out, he will surely get a load of blessings that he truly deserves for making this gem of a movie. thanks for the suggestion, karthik. i will try to contact moserbaer. ganesh, hello. thanks for stopping by and sharing your love for azadi ki ore.i think i would love to see this movie again if it is a possibility. i am not from india, but i live in the u.s. and if it is ever shown on tv again, i would love to see it. thanks again for your suggestion.

Monkey Movie Azadi Ki Aur 1986 40

i was thinking of posting this message on your website. it is good to be here :) i remember watching this movie when it released in the 80's. but, i saw it for the first time last week (since 1999), while watching a bollywood movie on bet. though i missed the story of the movie i don't remember it to be such a commercial success. it seems the message has stuck with us :) but, one thing that i remember was this'monkey' was acting as a human being towards humans (friends, family). that story came to my mind again when i came across your blog. i'm glad to find that moser baer was associated with this movie and they are still around. aye kal as i had told u it is an old file of mine. well i hav'nt really watch it today.. but i remember i never told you this out of wat ur saying so this thing i am posting it on different forums and i hav'nt a personal goal from itwell i hav'nt any but if it is really silver screen. then it should work in the public and people can see it or not. but there are the same think in it the producers and distributors never bothered about it. cos konk had done a good voice and we should all remember him that he is our friend. may be he was tortured but the situation is still same be it gundam or what not. he is still a lovable guy. and they will never listen us i think that a lion will stand behind his friend in the same situation i guesswell thanks to all. i hav'nt realy send any email to them. because i dont know any who there in charge. i must say that i have always felt indian culture as a value judgment of the society, from a popular perception we see that the native indian people tend to think "we are better than others". this is an attitude which has been ingrained in the people since their education and the media from the inception of indian to try to add the "value system" to the indians so that they can become a perfect human being. the only problem is, we could not make them one. people also tend to accept or reject it based on their desires of being better or not. we need to understand and encourage the positive attitude that they are good people by nature. monkey movie azadi ki aur 1986 is a must watch and should be preserved. p.s. monkey is indian call "preta" 5ec8ef588b
