(This article is a work in progress.) There are now a number of navigation products for the general consumer market, including integrated navigation systems for cars, in-dash CD-changer stereos, and aftermarket navigation systems. This article covers navigation systems that are on sale today, or will soon be on sale, in the United States and Canada. The in-car systems work best when they control the audio through the car's factory installed stereo system. You should configure your car's factory stereo to display the navigation in the upper left corner of the screen. Using a factory installed in-dash navigation system requires a pair of dedicated navigation buttons. If you purchased your current stereo, it should have the factory navigation buttons installed already. Whether you bought it new or found it at a low price, the buttons are available from dealers in a variety of styles, according to your vehicle's make and model. This article is about vehicles that have factory installed stereos with factory navigation installed. These are vehicles built in the U.S. and Canada, and that conform to safety standards from the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration.
